

GOVERNOR PARDONS

GRANDALL CAMPBELL

Young Man Who Voluntarily Surrenders After Escaping Will Go Home for Christmas.

WAS ARRESTED IN BRISTOL

Got on Spree in 1912 and in Altercation Struck Stranger Over Head With Whiskey Bottle—Would Not Make Known Pledge.

Crandall Campbell, serving a term of five years in the penitentiary for felonious assault, will be pardoned by Governor Stuart and released in time to spend Christmas at home with his parents in Johnson City, Tenn.

Campbell is a young man of respectable family connections in Tennessee, who wrecked his career by a spree in which he indulged when he went to Bristol, Va., in September, 1912, on business. While intoxicated, he became involved in an altercation with a stranger, and struck the man over the head with a whiskey bottle. He was arrested, indicted for felonious wounding and committed to jail. A sense of shame prevented him from making known his plight to his parents. His absence from home mystified them until he was brought to trial. The jury that tried him fixed his punishment at five years in the penitentiary.

ESCAPED FROM CONVICT ROAD FORCE

In October, 1912, he began his term on the roads. One year later, in October, 1913, young Crandall effected his escape from the convict camp in which he was working, near Orange Courthouse. Nothing more was heard of the fugitive until May 20, of this year, when he walked into the office of Governor Stuart at the Capitol and announced to Secretary Alexander Forsythe that he had, previously, escaped from a convict camp and desired to surrender himself to the Governor. The secretary heard Crandall's story. The Governor was not in the office, but the secretary communicated with him by telephone. Then he told the fugitive that he might expect nothing in the way of leniency from the executive.

The Governor says you must take your medicine. He will make no terms or conditions with you," Secretary Forsythe told the young fellow. "All right," replied Crandall, "I am willing to go back to prison." He sat at the secretary's desk and wrote a letter to his mother, notifying her of his determination to go back to the convict camp. The secretary directed him to the penitentiary, then notified the prison officials of the whereabouts of the runaway. But Crandall was weary of eluding the officers of the law. He went direct to the prison and surrendered himself.

It was the manly spirit displayed by the fugitive in returning voluntarily to the prison to pay the penalty exacted by the law, and his subsequent good conduct as a prisoner that won the interest of the Governor.

INTEREST IN MODEL ROAD

Many Counties Promise to Co-Operate in Keeping Up Highway.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] WASHINGTON, December 12.—A model road will soon extend from the national capital to Atlanta, Ga., if the plans of the Department of Public Roads are carried out.

The department started a project last year by which the counties through which the Washington-Atlanta model road is to pass are to pay for the upkeep of this road, provide local engineers supervise the project, making it an object lesson in the maintenance of good roads.

The project has met with splendid success. Over half the counties covered by the road system have applied to co-operate in keeping up the road. Such widespread interest has been aroused that civic organizations in Augusta, Savannah and Jacksonville have requested the work to be extended to their districts.

GOVERNMENT PAYS OUT TOTAL OF $1,803,923

More Than 14,000 of Its Employees Receive Sums Under Compensation Act.

WASHINGTON, December 12.—A total of $1,803,923 has been paid by the Federal government during the last five years under the compensation act to more than 14,000 of its employees who met with accidents in the course of their work, according to a report today by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The act now embraces approximately 95,000 persons, or somewhat less than one-fourth of the government's civilian employees. It covers artisans and laborers in manufacturing establishments, arsenals and navy yards, river and harbor and fortification work, hazardous employment in the reclamation of lands, all employees under the Smithsonian Canal Commission, the Bureau of Mines, the Lighthouse Service and the Forestry Service.

Accidents reported in all departments during the operation of the law numbered 42,290. Of that number 1,006 were reported as fatal, approximately 10 per cent of which were in occupations not subject to compensation. The number of claims was 14,953, of which 14,046 were allowed, 911 were disallowed and six were not acted upon.

Nearly one-half of the accidents and of the compensation paid refer to employees of the Panama Canal, who worked under conditions involving a high degree of hazard.

FINAL MEETING IS HELD AT HAMPTON INSTITUTE

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] HAMPTON, Va., December 12.—The National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education held the final meeting of its eighth convention at Hampton Institute today. C. A. Prosser, said Hampton is an unanswerable argument in favor of industrial education. "Hampton," he said, "has clearly defined the place of the private school in education. Industrial schools are not for lame ducks, but for red-blooded children. The measure of Hampton is what its graduates are doing. It is giving an excellent account of its stewardship. Hampton is putting theory and philosophy into practice, and is a shining promise of better days in industrial education."

Those who spoke were Dr. Hollis B. Pritchett, principal of Hampton; Charles A. Bennett, editor of the Manual Training Magazine, heads of departments at Hampton, and R. C. Stearnes, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

ENGLISH WARSHIPS COAL FROM BRITISH COLLIERIES

Permitting Report That Supplies Are Transferred on High Seas Fifty Miles South of Panama.

PANAMA, December 12.—It was persistently reported here today that six British warships met four British colliers yesterday on the high seas fifty miles south of Panama, and coaled from them. It is believed locally that warships came from Australian waters; one of them is even said to be the Australian battle cruiser Australia.

For several days there has been much wireless interference, and it is believed the colliers and the warships have been in communication. Ships captains reaching Balboa have reported the nearness of British cruisers.

Six British colliers have called at Panama during the last few days. A British cruiser was said last night to have come close in to Balboa. She is supposed to have been trying to locate colliers.

A Japanese fleet is said to be off the Chilean coast, and the British warships are believed to have sailed for the south to effect a junction.
